as we see it

Martin and Lewis have brought joy to the hearts of TV comedy writers by announcing that they will pay their own particular brace of writers $52,000 this season—$10,400 for each of five shows.

It's no secret that writers are a comic's most valuable asset, or liability. That is especially true in a medium that uses material as quickly as TV does.

Generally speaking, television comedy writers are well paid. Turning out funny lines is an extremely technical profession and the lads with a knack for garnering chuckles usually demand high pay.

Other television writers don't do so well. The men who write plays for the many dramatic shows on the air are lucky to earn $1200 for a full hour production. And it takes them weeks to write a drama.

Some famous authors have tried TV and the networks have paid them well, by television standards. William Faulkner had a go at it and, in the opinion of critics, turned out a fair to middlin' effort. Ben Hecht did an entire series that flopped. So apparently writing a good TV play is as much of an art as writing comedy.

The upshot is that many top dramatists have no interest in trying to write for television. The risk of failure is great, and even if they do a good job, the money is quite low compared with the income they might have from a Broadway production.

Some television dramas pay a writer no more than the leading actor. The actor works a week or ten days on the play. The writer may spend a month or two turning it out.

If the writer's salary were made as important a part of a dramatic show's budget as it is of a comedy show's budget, TV would attract better writers. And the good ones who are in TV now would not be looking so longingly at Broadway.

Teen-Agers On Their Way

IF television is something of a built-in pension plan for old comedians and even older jokes, it is also a built-in summer stock circuit for a lot of youngsters who are dying to be actresses. It is even better than summer stock, in fact, for it's in business the year around and pays a lot better.

The three teen-agers on these pages are typical of the youngsters who are finding TV both profitable and educational. They are also a study in contrasts. One is a veteran professional, one a smart newcomer with her eyes focused strictly on a career, one a happy-go-lucky girl who sort of fell into the Life of Riley series and is a bride of two months.

Oddly enough, the youngest of the three actually is the oldest in point of service, so far as acting is concerned, although she is fairly new to television. At 16, Natalie Wood has more good picture credits on her record than many actresses twice her age, including such standouts as The Blue Veil with Jane Wyman, The Star with Bette Davis, The Bride Wore Boots with Barbara Stanwyck, Miracle on 34th Street with Edmund Gwenn, Just For You with Bing Crosby.

The youngster has been at it professionally since she was four, having appeared with her mother, Mrs. Marcia Wood, as an extra in something called Happy Land back in 1941. Two years later, she got the role of the little orphan in Tomorrow is Forever, with Claudette Colbert and Orson Welles. After that one, she was in.

Although she had only four TV roles to her credit, she was an easy choice for the part of Paul Hartman's teen-age daughter in ABC-TV's new Pride of the Family film series. She finds the pace a little faster than in the movies, but it doesn't bother her. Nothing bothers her. She goes to high school, collects both classical and popular records, maintains a small menagerie of pets and is indifferent on the subject of marriage.

Karen Sharpe, at 18, is a girl with a purpose: success. For a girl still in her teens and with barely a year of TV behind her, she has to date been something of an unsung phenomenon in the medium, a professional success if not yet a personal hit with the viewers. Her first TV film was Range Riders, in which she played the leader of a bandit gang, of all things, and her most recent has her cast as a "bad girl" in one of the first of the new Ray Milland series, Meet Mr. McNutley. In between she has appeared on such standouts as Lux Video Theater, Ford Theater, Racket Squad, Private Secretary and The Playhouse of Stars.

Glamor From Texas

Karen, the most glamorous of the three girls, came to Hollywood from Texas in 1948 but doesn't sound like it. She lives with her mother in an apartment house in Hollywood, just above Hollywood Boulevard. She's a single-minded girl, bent on an acting career. She is now studying both ballet and singing, dabbles in charcoal drawing, is a steady reader and is competently active in sports.

Oddly enough, Karen is more interested in doing TV than motion pictures, and would rather do live TV than film. "It's a question of economics," she says matter-of-factly. "I could sign with a major studio at something like $250 a week and get lost. I can make much more than that in TV, and the variety of roles is an education in itself." However, she has just signed a seven-year contract with an independent producer for both TV and movie work.

The Girl Next Door

Lugene Sanders, the third of this cheerfully successful little trio of teen-agers, is perhaps best decribed as the girl next door. A veteran of 39 Life of Riley films as Bill Bendix's daughter, Babs, she leads a rather hectic existence when the show is in production. Works six days a week, followed by four off, and goes to her classes at night at the University of Southern California. This means up at 6 a.m. and never a break until her last class is over at 10 p.m. At 19, she can take it.

Like Karen, Lugene didn't come to Hollywood until relatively late in life when she was 15, fresh out of Oklahoma City. She, too, made a beeline for the Hollywood Professional School and got her first acting parts in radio. She made something of a local splash in her TV debut in the title role of Meet Corliss Archer, a show which never caught on but which at least led her straight into the Life of Riley series. While she has a five-year contract with the show, she's sure it won't last that long but is too nice to be doing any underhanded looking around for new roles. She was married in September to Marvin Solomon, a USC student.

All three girls agree that television is an enormous lot of fun. What none of the three has assimilated yet, however, is the fact that TV, a peculiar animal among the arts, has still to develop a genuine female star under 35. Still in their happy teens, they have a long way to go before approaching the stature of the Shores, the Cocas, the Allisons, the Rayes, the Bankheads, the Balls, the Ardens or even the Faye Emersons. Youth, fortunately, is on their side.

BONINO show scheduled to end December 26. How can anybody fire the father of eight children on the day after Christmas?

It sounds as if Scrooge had landed a job as an NBC vice-president.

Bonino is the show where Ezio Pinza plays the part of an opera singer who is away from home a lot, but not always. His show has more youngsters running around than Public School 120. The show is one part Pinza and eight parts Juvenile Jury. All the storks must have stopped here on their way to the Stork Club.

The eight children have been motherless, homeless, and now, worst of all, they're going to be sponsor-less. The only show with as many little mouths to feed is Zoo Parade. This program was like the Children's Hour, squeezed into 30 minutes.

As one TV critic asked: "Who wrote this show? Papa Dionne?"

Bonino was just about the only show that had regular fire drills. It was a tough assignment for Ezio because he not only had to learn the show, he had to help the kids with their homework.

Bonino* already has eight children, but there's still one way to save the show. Adopt Julius La Rosa.

An Artist Off Stage, Too

Dinah Shore, the singing painter: 'All I want out of it is a hobby, not a mission.

Pebble Beach's 17 Mile Drive is her pet. She's not sold on still life (below).

Dinah's An Avid 'Sunday Painter'

While there may be better and more serious painters among Hollywood's rapidly blossoming art colony, none is more prolific or gets more genuine fun out of it than Dinah Shore, several of whose paintings are reproduced on these pages.

"Me, I'm strictly a Sunday painter," Dinah rates herself. "Too stiff to be any good, but it sure is a lot of fun." A fast worker, she can turn out a small canvas in one hour flat and has done about 125 during the past three years. "I've really lost count of them," she says. "They're stashed away in closets all over the house and out in the garage and in George's hair."

Landscapes and seascapes are her favorite subjects, although she'll tackle anything except portraits. "The subjects," she says flatly, "look as though they've been dead for several hours by the time I've finished with them."

Dinah took to painting three years ago when she first saw some of Van Johnson's work and thought she'd have a go at it "just for fun." She promptly went out and bought all the wrong equipment and started throwing paint on canvas. Her first effort was so loaded with protruding paint that it looked like something out of a 3-D movie. "She didn't paint it," Robert Cummings was moved to comment, "she chewed it."

Lessons Too Competitive

She started taking lessons about a year ago but gave it up in short order. "Too competitive," she says. "All I want out of it is a hobby, not a mission."

Dinah is not particularly enthusiastic over her own work. She gets a big kick out of doing a canvas but wastes little time looking at it once it's finished. Her favorite is a seascape of 17 Mile Drive at Pebble Beach, California, which she sketched roughly during her vacation a year ago and painted when she got home. "I have to see my subject," she says. "I'm not very good at dreaming something up."

Keeps Her Favorites

Another favorite is one of her most recent efforts, a still life of a vase of flowers done especially for TV GUIDE. In answer to a tactful question as to who at TV GUIDE was going to get it, she replied promptly, "Nobody. It's one of the few really good things I've ever done and I'm going to keep it myself." Actually, it's not really a very good painting at all.

Dinah has sold only two of her paintings. Selling them was—and still is—the farthest thought from her mind. One was snapped up at an exhibition of stars' canvasses, much to her surprise. The second, a portrait of her daughter, Missy, was bought by a friend. Dinah would have given it away, but the friend said sharply, "Never give away a painting. Keep it or sell it." She sold it.

Dinah hanging a scene she dashed off in less than a hour, using a photo as a model.

Kathi Norris: women, traditional buyers, are now becoming sellers, too, on TV.

They've Got Sales Appeal

In TV it's no longer a man's world

THE fertile minds of the ad agency moguls seldom rest. Their common goal—to get the sponsors' products moving—has resulted in a tremendous variety of TV advertising. Everything from musical cigarettes and marching sparkplugs to the cozy-type salesman cooing for his product's advantages are now commonplace. Lately, though, there's been a trend afoot to hire women—TV Pitchgirls—to do commercials on a long term basis. The idea of a female handling a commercial is hardly new, but there's news in the move toward one woman becoming a living trademark.

The avante-garde TV Pitchgirl, of course, was Betty Furness, a red-headed persuader who has subjected herself to the cold blasts of opened refrigerators for lo these many video years. "If it's Westinghouse," the slogan should read, "you can be sure it's Betty Furness."

Now, ad men are scouring the talent directories for more of the same. "Wanted: charming, glib saleslady with broad smile for TV work; should look and sound like a housewife, but need not be; must believe in product; actress preferred; long-term contract; insincere girls need not apply." That's more or less what they want.

The trend is taking hold. Large corporations have gone out and hired pitchgirls. General Electric has Kathi Norris; Colgate employs Candy Jones; Admiral's girl is Muriel Williams; and Borden's recently signed Betty Johnson. The ad men's hope: when a consumer thinks of either the girl or the product, he thinks of both.

A Fast Ad Lib

In recent months the four mentioned new pitchgirls, blessed with broad smiles and nice long-term contracts, have been plugging their sponsors' products. Of the lot, the most experienced in the art of The Sell is GE's Kathi Norris who spent more than four years on a New York TV station singing the praises of such items as one-armed egg beaters and ketchup dispensers for a department store. Kathi made her hour of vending, plus interviews, each weekday strictly a family affair by cohawking wares with her husband, TV producer Wilbur Stark, and occasionally daughter Pamela, now 7½. (Pamela still has a lot to learn about Mommy's profession; upon biting into a sponsor's doughnut once, she made a face and said, "I don't like it." Adlibbed Mommy, sweetly but firmly, "Well, dear, millions of others do.")

Candy Jones, a fair-complexioned model who married the boss (glamor connoisseur Harry Conover) is Colgate's charm girl. Unlike Kathi, this is Candy's first real dip into handling commercials. Her role is that of a peaches and cream beauty who is a shining example of how to stay "irresistible" by bathing with a Colgate soap. Her commercials are paying off. Since the sponsor hired Candy sales have hit a new high.

Leave That Door Open

Apparently the ad man's favorite subject for a pretty pitchgirl is still the ever-ajar refrigerator door. Check the Bishop Sheen show and you'll see Muriel Williams beaming over an ice tray or gleefully pointing out the unwithered meat, the unspoiled eggs, the crisp vegetables in an Admiral refrigerator. Muriel, an established stage actress, is like most of the other video salesgirls in the new advertising scheme of things: she's practically inseparable from her product. She's Admiral's Girl.

Then there's little Betty Johnson, a Down South package with a slight drawl who chirps commercials for Borden's on Treasury Men In Action. Betty isn't exactly in competition with Borden's original pitchgirl, Elsie the Cow. She's more of a running mate to that celebrated dairy bovine. In any case, pert Betty is one of the few who takes singing the praises of old Sponsor U. literally. She's a professional at it, having sung with the Johnson Family Singers and also as a soloist.

Pitchgirls try as much as possible to look the part of the modern, middle-class housewife, which many of them are. "We dress," said one TV sales gal, "not in aprons or flimsy little prints like most homemakers, but rather in clothes a housewife would wear if she only had time." Their talks stick mostly to the honest, direct approach with a liberal sprinkling of female gushing. The pay is good, the work is steady. But with few exceptions the girls don't want to live out their careers as walking trademarks. Underneath they're actresses all.

Chicago Dateline

TV's Week: All that lower-lip biting at Chicago's TV talent migrating eastward changed to smiles in the face of a recent incident. Comely Tomi Thurston, the Windy City version of Betty Furness, hawked the Sunbeam commercials on NBC's New York film series, Ethel and Albert. When the show switched to live presentations, Tomi was retained as huckster. But she'll do her selling right from a Chicago studio.

Thurston

WBKB's efforts to build its feminine authority, Mique Collis, into a controversial Duggan-type personality seems to be thriving. Mique is bucking present-day fashion trends by vetoing mass production of any one style (including short skirts) for women. She also no like hoop earrings.

That ambitious project undertaken by producer Bernard Goodman (an all-star Negro revue) has been tabled for the time being. Goodman claims lack of available program time was the major reason. But could be that the $8,500 weekly production costs (his original estimate was closer to $6,000) might have had something to do with it.

Something new has been added to Santa Claus' domicile at the North Pole—a TV station. This was revealed recently when WBKB came up with Santa Claus' North Pole Revue, a seasonal replacement for Channel 7's short-lived Childcraft Show. Cliff Soubier of Super Circus fame heads up the cast of pixies and gnomes who aid St. Nick with his letters, requests and records.

Barbara Moro's marriage November 19th to actor Robert Borlek (stage name: Rob George) was sandwiched in between professional commitments. The schedule went something like this: Babs finished her commercial stint on The Childcraft Show at 10 AM; ceremony at 11; luncheon with friends at 12; personal appearance by Bob at 2 PM; dinner together; 8:30 PM curtain for Bob, who appears in the Showcase Theater production, Live Wire. Bob, incidentally, was Babs' leading man in Chevy Chase's summer theater series.

Claude Kirchner's slip-of-the-tongue brought some hearty chuckles (as well as blushes) the other Sunday. Spieling the commercial, Claude bloopered, "Many other Super Circus fakes..." He meant "folks."

Advance Tips on Shows: Don Herbert (WNBQ's Mr. Wizard) takes off for New York on his annual vacation Nov. 30. While in Gotham, Don will guest on Who Said That, Nov. 30 and on Dave Garroway's Today, Dec. 4. Kinescopes of Mr. Wizard will be shown during Don's absence.

Bellamy

WGN-TV replaces Ethel Barrymore Theater with the Ralph Bellamy live starrer, Man Against Crime, beginning Dec. 20. The Barrymore series runs out then.

A to Z of Cookery begins its Christmas theme on WGN-TV Dec. 1 with a gingerbread family, then follows it up Dec. 8 with cookie and candy houses and on Dec. 14, edible Christmas decorations. The goodies made on the show will be packed off to Children's Memorial Hospital.

ANIMAL

WHAT TV'S BIRDS AND

By MAGGIE THE MAGPIE

Dear Boss,

So you finally took me out of the cub reporters' ranks. I was really pleased when you gave me this assignment on the Thanksgiving menus planned by Chicago's TV menagerie. I dispatched myself post-haste with pencil and note paper to the TV studios. Here's what happened:

My first stop was the circus room at WNBQ where my friend, Elmer the Elephant, hangs out. He repeated his menu to me—with just a little help from trainer John Conrad. Elmer is one of the finest cooks I know—never forgets a recipe. He's cooking Thanksgiving dinner for John and himself from Pack E. Derm School of Fancy Cookery recipes.

First thing Garfield Goose said to me when I greeted him behind his castle walls at WBBM-TV was, "Well, you can be sure it won't be roast goose!" He told me his motto this Thanksgiving was "Protect the goose that's on the loose." Friend Frazer Thomas added that Thanksgiving will definitely be meatless Thursday in the castle.

Bobo, the woolly dog, arfed a warm welcome when I found him and his bulb-nosed master, Nicky, around WBKB. Nicky had promised his faithful pal anything he wanted for Thanksgiving. I think Nicky will have some difficulty keeping his promise.

My next stop was at the lair of the Happy Pirates over at WBKB. Found Bubbles the Porpoise swabbing the deck while Squawky the Parrot needled her unmercifully. Bubbles stopped to smack her lips over her Thanksgiving delectables. Squawky, of course, tried to outchatter me. I listened to his parrot palaverings long enough and then cut him off with, "Bye-bye, old boy!"

Found my conversational match, though, when I went to the Pied Piper's forest at WBKB to check with Myrtle the Turtle. She's the unseen telephone operator for the Grapevine Telephone and Telegraph Co., you know. It was a full two hours before I got her menu.

But, I finally completed my interviews, whizzed back to my typewriter in the treetops and knocked out the animals' Thanksgiving menus. Thanks, boss, for the chance—and especially for that swell by-line.

Milwaukee Dateline

TV's Week: A station in Davenport, Ia., WOC-TV, is up in arms over the Hearst Corp.'s plan to snag a VHF permit for Whitefish Bay near Milwaukee. The Iowa outlet claims the allocation would raise havoc on the air waves between Milwaukee and Davenport. The new UHF Television Assn. has already filed objections with the FCC. Meanwhile, three applicants are squabbling for the third VHF channel authorized for Milwaukee proper.

Singer

Are clowns passe? Lan Singer, who as Uncle Natco hosts WCAN-TV's noontime Kids Karnival, has forsaken his clown garb for a bizarre space suit.

A boatload of mittens and sweaters, all knit by WTMJ-TV femme viewers, is en route to Korea for Christmas distribution to needy children. Beulah Donohue's campaign for the woolens via Woman's World netted 1,182 items.

Newcomer Clark Smith has been saddled with the job of keeping order on Club 25, WCAN-TV's musical frolic targeted at teen-agers. He's been named emcee of the Saturday (3:30 PM.) revels.

A big reunion took place Thanksgiving Day on WTMJ-TV's Behind the Screens show. Bill Carlsen, currently Channel 4's weatherman, met the members of his old pre-war band.

The New Show: Santa Claus (or his double) will headline a new daily suppertime feature (replacing TV Topics) on Channel 25, starting Nov. 30. As yet untitled, it will span the Christmas season. WCAN-TV will also begin an educational kid stanza it's mapped out with the Milwaukee Museum this Sun., Nov. 29 at 1 PM. And at 11:30 AM the same day, WTMJ-TV debuts Movies for Kids.

Advance Tips on Shows: Toast of the Town will premiere at last in Milwaukee on December 6. WCAN-TV (Channel 25) will carry it Sundays at 7 PM.

5 4 BOXING—New York
Lulu Perez vs. Dave Gallardo, 10 rounds, featherweights.

JIMMY POWERS RATINGS:

	Rated	W	L	KO's
Perez	5	32	1	12
Gallardo	9	21	5	9

This is a rematch. Perez won a nine-round TKO on Sept. 4th. He was behind on a majority of the officials' scorecards when the bout had to be stopped because of a bad cut on Gallardo's left eye. Dave forced most of the early fighting, scoring with a long over-hand right, and for the moment made the dancing, prancing Perez look like a novice. I think it was an off night for Perez. He has looked better. Lulu should repeat against Gallardo.

Dancer Toni Sons backed by five tiny cohorts finishes a spirited gypsy number.

Talent Tots

MAKE WAY FOR TOMORROW

JUDY GARLAND was launched on her career as singer and dancer before she was three. Donald O'Connor made his vaudeville debut at the age of 13 months. And Shirley Temple, when barely out of swaddling clothes, was a Hollywood star, drawing down fantastic sums even by today's standards.

Talent Tots, a new amateur show unveiled last month by WGN-TV, can cite such histories to prove it has a good purpose for being on TV. It's designed to give local youngsters, who show a flair for singing, dancing, comedy, mimicry or the like, a chance to be properly showcased. And while the show has no illusions of finding another Garland, O'Connor or Temple right off, it does hope to foster talent wherever possible.

This note of encouragement is echoed in Talent Tots' format. There's no contest for prizes and no judges to impress, so the kids, who range from 3 to 13, escape the strain of competition as well as the stigma of being a "loser." And the people behind Talent Tots are not unhappy that they can skirt the fierce wrath of disappointed parents. All told, this factor of equal recognition is one of the most pleasant aspects of the show, seen each Thursday at 5 PM.

Another asset to the program is pretty Connie Baxter who doubles as singer and emcee. Connie shepherds her young charges through their paces with ease and grace. The red-haired Miss Baxter is a relative newcomer to Chicago from the Broadway stage (where she had leads in such hits as Carousel and Finian's Rainbow). Her neat vocalizing is enhanced by music from The Starnoters, Channel 9's star combo, who also serve as accompanists for the small fry.

To recruit children, all public and parochial schools throughout Chicagoland are canvassed for promising moppets. Youngsters—or their parents—are also urged to write directly to Talent Tots for auditions. These tryouts are held regularly to pick the four or five acts used weekly.

In an effort to encourage what seems like a worthwhile experiment in the juvenile field, TV GUIDE in cooperation with Talent Tots will choose one child each week for four weeks as TV GUIDE's special guest on the show. This TV GUIDE guest will appear and perform on four consecutive Thursdays, beginning December 3.

Hostess Connie Baxter interviews crooner Don Cornell. Such guest stars advise kids.

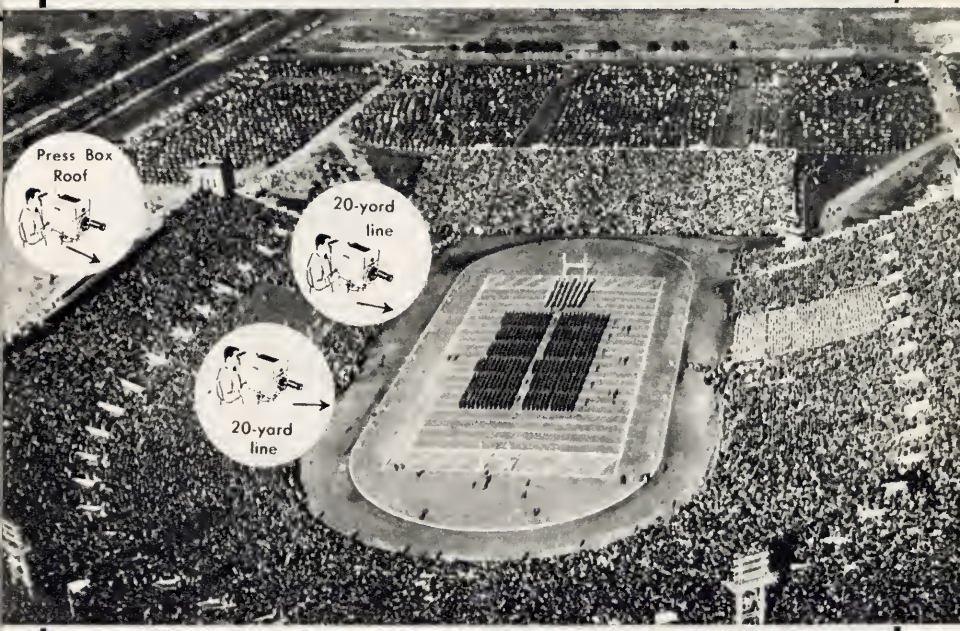
Army-Navy Football Game

Today at 12:15 PM on Channels [4] and 5



WHEN NBC-TV brings you the 54th renewal of this, the most glamorous of all football games, the camera coverage from Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium will be as indicated on the photo above. There'll be two cameras on the two 20-yard lines, and one on the mid-field stripe. Both will be mounted atop the press box on the stadium's rim. The latter will be equipped with a Zoomar lens that will take you right into the huddles and into scrimmage melees.

Navy has won the last three games, but Army still leads in the series, 27-22. There have been four ties.

Both teams have spotty records for this season. However, as has been so often observed, when Army meets Navy, past records mean little in the inspiration of what is always the game of the year for both teams. These historic encounters between the Middies of Annapolis and the Cadets from West Point have drawn crowds as large as 100,000 in the past.

Army is coached by Earl Blaik; Navy by Eddie Erdelatz. The rosters of both teams follow:

ARMY: 10 Vann; 11 Cody; 12 Mericle; 16 Hagan; 21 Purdue; 22 Zeigler; 24 Ward; 25 Wynn; 30 Cockrell; 32 Lodge; 34 Uebel; 37 Miller; 38 Chance; 46 Bell; 48 Attaya; 50 Hicks; 51 Stephen; 52 Kramer; 54 Lasley; 55 Farris; 58 Zaborowski; 60 Lunn; 62 Ziegler; 63 Chesnauskas; 64 Shannon; 65 Franklin; 66 Bruno; 67 Lodge; 68 Herdman; 70 Melnik; 71 Glock; 77 Riess; 79 Krause; 80 Ernst; 81 Doremus; 82 Lapchick; 83 Sisson; 84 Holleder; 85 Ordway; 86 Satterfield; 87 Mischak.

NAVY: 11 Welsh; 15 Knotts; 16 Weaver; 21 Hepworth; 22 Thomas; 24 Werness; 25 Padberg; 27 Garrow; 36 Gattuso; 44 Craig; 48 Jackson; 49 Monahan; 51 Olson; 52 Dutnell; 60 Leach; 61 Aronis; 62 Davis; 64 Benzi; 66 Eisenhauer; 68 Textor; 69 Royer; 70 Webster; 72 Honse; 75 Kozischek; 78 Bendrick; 79 Perkins; 80 Beagle; 81 Owen; 82 Fullam; 83 Hopkins; 84 Anderson; 85 Riester; 86 Byrom; 87 Holden; 88 Cronin.

SPORTSCAST

by ED PAZDUR

A Sport Of Integrity...

ON the eve of Kid Gavilan's now famous drubbing of Johnny Bratton in the latter's bid for the welterweight crown, a lofty-minded sportscaster heard with monotonous regularity on a local TV station, waved a menacing finger. "Take it from me. I've a confidential source. The word is the boys out East are not taking money on this fight. That means Bratton will take the title," he confided. The rumor was annoyingly persistent until fight time.

But Gavilan's decisive pummeling of Bratton proved boxing is a sport of integrity. The Stadium's sell-out for the title bout also proved Chicago is still America's top fight town.

Pudgy Jack Russell, energetic TV huckster, has Roller Derby films available for video... Fight manager Jack Begun, currently grooming Chicago's 23-year-old Rocky Casillo for a crack at the welterweight title, turned down his biggest offer ($15,000) for a chance to appear in Madison Square Garden.

Cuffnote: A complete schedule of Saturday afternoon National Basketball Association games will be televised on WGN-TV beginning Saturday, Dec. 19. 7 BOXING—From Toledo
Carmen Basilio vs. Johnny Cunningham, 10 rounds, welterweights.

JIMMY POWERS' RATINGS:

	Rated	W	L	D	KO's
Basilio	5th	36	11	5	18
Cn'gh'm	Not	9	24	3	1

This is Basilio's first start since his close title go with Kid Gavilan. Remember how he had the champion on the floor in the second round, and how he came down the strech to hold the great Gavilan to a split verdict. Carmen shouldn't have too much trouble with his neighbor. But Cunningham can surprise too. He recently defeated champion Jimmy Carter in an over-weight match in Miami. So he can score an upset if Basilio shouldn't be up to his top form. The pick is Basilio.

9 BOXING—Eastern Parkway
Paddy De Marco vs. Brian Kelly, 10 rounds, lightweights.

JIMMY POWERS' RATING

	Rated	W	L	D	KO's
De Marco	6th	65	10	2	7
Kelly	Not	33	10	2	15

Paddy De Marco is again boxing in home territory, although this club has been a jinx for him to score victories. Against newcomer Kelly, a Canadian, De Marco should be too unorthodox. Kelly, managed by Joe Woodman, is a bright prospect, but he is matched against too experienced an opponent in De Marco.

9:00 2 [4] [25] BOXING—Detroit
Ernie Durando vs. Norman Hayes, 10 rounds, middleweights.
JIMMY POWERS' RATING:

	Rated	W	L	D	KO's
Durando	8th	36	14	4	27
Hayes	not	22	16	1	7

This is Durando's first start since his quick knockout over Humez in Europe on Oct. 22. He is one of the most dangerous punchers in the middleweight division. Hayes is on leave from the US Army. He is well known to the Detroit boxing fans for his sterling bouts there. Norman will make a go of it just as long as his condition lasts. But as the bout goes into the late rounds, Hayes will be a stationary target for the hard-socking Jerseyite. A victory for Durando will put him right back in the middleweight picture. I pick Ernie.

NEW YORK Bob Stahl reports:

Rumors that ARTHUR GODFREY's sister, KATHY, will be teamed with JULIUS LA ROSA and ARCHIE BLEYER for a new TV show are strictly phony. NBC is considering KATHY as emcee of its projected Home show, a "woman's magazine of TV." The distaff GODFREY now has three local TV shows and one radio show in Phoenix, Ariz.

Looks like EZIO PINZA's Bonino is the first major program casualty of the season. Its sponsor has cancelled after the Dec. 26 telecast. No replacement as yet . . . ABC planning a Dr. Eye-Q, Jr. show for kids, to start after the first of the year; with jelly beans as pay-off.

The ways of TV seem dubious, not devious. TAD MOSEL, who wrote "The Haven" for a recent TV Playhouse presentation, was worried that its theme of marital infidelity might not be cleared by NBC. But NBC had only one objection--where a character in the play referred to "an old Chevvy," he was asked to change it to read "an old car."

Here's one way to be sure of a "captive audience" for TV: ABC is auditioning a new half-hour program featuring the noted hypnotist, DR. POLGAR, who appeared several years ago on the Godfrey and Friends program. Don't worry, though. He'll work only with the studio audience, not the home audience.

VIC DAMONE, who couldn't do any TV without M-G-M's consent, apparently sang his sweetest to get his contract rewritten. He can now appear as a guest star whenever he wants, if he isn't busy movie-making . . . A new TV dramatic series is in the works, based on THORNTON WILDER's "Our Town."

NBC is launching a nationwide search to find a new "Princess Summerfall Winterspring" for Howdy Doody. JUDY TYLER, the incumbent, is branching out into TV and the stage under her own name . . . CBS is auditioning a nighttime program to star RICHARD HAYES, featured vocalist on its new JACK PAAR daytime show.

If ABC's plans for its Ziegfeld Follies series materialize, it should be one of TV's biggest weekly extravaganzas. Network wants GINGER ROGERS, ETHEL MERMAN, SOPHIE TUCKER, PHIL SILVERS and ETHEL WATERS to rotate as stars. LEON LEONIDOFF, who produces Radio City Music Hall stage shows, would produce the program.

PERRY COMO, who won his comedy spurs as guest star on All Star Review last year, may headline one Comedy Hour program this season. He'd replace ABBOTT & COSTELLO, forced to postpone their stints because of LOU COSTELLO's continuing illness.

Dan Jenkins reports:

Telemeter, one of the three major subscription TV companies, starts operating in Palm Springs Nov. 28 on a permanent basis. They're using land lines instead of sending the signal through the air, thus avoiding the necessity of FCC approval . . . The anti-TV feeling among the bigger stars has vanished to the point where CARY GRANT, given the right material, is willing to move in. So, for that matter, would a lot of other top movie names. But the right material is always the sticking point.

HAL ROACH, SR., will start production around Dec. 1 on his National Repertory Theater dramatic series, rotating four name players and developing new personalities . . . JACK WEBB, hardly a dreamer, is prepared to give up his left arm to get JUDY GARLAND to do the Pete Kelly's Blues film series with him.

It was inevitable and now it's official. JIGGS & MAGGIE are coming to TV via a film series . . . Now it's CBS which is "preparing a TV format for BETTY HUTTON." . . . BEN LYON and BEBE DANIELS to produce and star in a new dramatic series to be filmed in London.

IRENE RYAN has completed the pilot for her own series, The Gay Little Spinster.

RCA-NBC's first West Coast Color TV demonstration brought out all the exclamation points the local press could find. Demonstration was an unqualified success from every standpoint. Those picture executives who deigned to attend (all were invited) left in a state of extreme concern. It was easily the biggest day in West Coast TV history.

The word on both the ED WYNN and MICKEY ROONEY pilot films is all to the good, with ROONEY's already sold to General Motors. The WYNN show, however, will be done live. Jane Froman's Tips on Christmas Gifts

Jane Froman: a hooked rug for a friend.

AS CHRISTMAS draws near, Jane Froman sets a record for being the busiest woman in TV. "Nothing in the world is as nice or as flattering as receiving a handmade gift—especially at Christmas," Jane says. "It may be old-fashioned, but it shows that you think a great deal of someone when you take the time to make a gift."

Last Christmas, Jane gave away 28 samples of her handiwork—five baby sweaters to her Godchildren, three stoles, plus an assortment of socks, scarves, mittens; and for her mother, Jane knitted a dress.

She also does chair seat covers in needlepoint and is learning to hook rugs. An ambitious project, she thinks it the easiest one she has ever undertaken. "All you do is punch where the pattern tells you to."

If you've never knitted or crocheted before, Jane advises starting on a simple project such as a stole, using a large loop stitch. "It'll go so fast, you'll be encouraged to do other things. And you'd be surprised how easy it is to find time to make these gifts. I knit at rehearsals or at home when I'm watching TV," she says.

Although her grandmother taught her to knit, crochet and tat by the time she was eight, she never concentrated on handiwork until her hospitalization. "In the years I spent in hospitals, I made 84 pairs of socks."

Jane just completed her first afghan, another ambitious project. "I never thought I'd finish it," she admits. "It was knitted in strips and then sewn together. But I'm so proud of it now. Maybe I do this because it's tangible. When you sing a song, it's gone. But when you create something with your hands, you have it forever."

She advises the novice knitter to seek instructions from a local yarn store. "That's their business . . . to encourage you to knit. And if you start work now, come Christmas, you'll be giving someone a very special handmade gift."

DIETS AND ULCERS VS. TURKEY AND STUFFING:

THANKSGIVING DINNER

Fred Allen: a washing machine to mix dressing or, sometimes, a concrete mixer.

Marion Lorne and Wally Cox: he remembers but she has been on a 17-year diet.

Sam Levenson: no turkey. He's a fat-free, salt-free, food-free diet man, himself.

IN THE interests of Thanksgiving, our goodie investigator, a stuffing man by trade, set out after the facts—to find how turkeys are stuffed and consumed in the top TV homes.

The fact is that turkeys are liked well enough, but what with ulcers and dieting, the only real eating is done by J. Fred Muggs, a vegetarian by birth and a confessed grape addict, and 11½-year-old Brandon De Wilde, a bonafide turkey man. Brandon was even overheard to shout, "Oh boy, I love drum sticks." But he turned out to be nondiscriminating, a point he gave away when he confided, "I like stuffing just about any way."

Since "any way" borders on the haphazard, a dangerous zone, we asked Muggsie for his preference. A real gourmet, he let us in on an old anthropoid recipe which we pass along for all old anthropoid readers:

This Is A Recipe?

Stuffing—Throw Away the Turkey.

Take 2 bananas, separate and discard skins, 13 fistfuls of wild rice, 18½ helpings of big fat grapes, 2¼ boxes Pablum, ½ box corn flakes, assorted nuts. Mix gently, serve. Don't slip in any of that awful tasting vitamin oil.

For old Homo sapiens readers, we asked the same question of old Homo sapiens. "Sam Levenson," we said, "How do you like turkey stuffing?"

"Me—eat stuffing? I'm on a salt-free, fat-free, food-free diet. Anything I eat looks ready for burial. Even if I could have turkey, my son gets the white meat, because he's a child. When I was a child, my father got the white meat. So when, I want to know, do I get it?"

WITH THE STARS

Cox," we said, "How do you like your Thanksgiving turkey stuffing?"

Wally: "I like it very much."

"And you, Marion Lorne?" (Mrs. Gurney).

"I've forgotten. I've been dieting for 17 years."

"How about you, Milton Berle?"

"I have one every week—on my television program."

"And you, Sid Caesar?"

Sid groaned deliciously. Hopes mounted. His words gushed: "I like a rich chestnut dressing piled four inches high, steeped in piping hot giblet sauce. It should be surrounded by a mound of creamy whipped potatoes with another crater of hot giblet sauce, mounds of golden brown turkey, a cupful of whole, succulent cranberries and lots of luscious creamed onions. But I'm on a diet. So maybe I'll get a couple of boiled turkey wings."

Saddened but persistent, our investigator plodded on, and in the last weary moment, fortitude, just like it's supposed to do, paid off. We give you one New England turkey stuffing recipe from the kitchen of Fred Allen.

It includes melba toast crumbs, shredded wheat germ, yogurt, and as the piece de resistance, boiled turkey rind. Fred mixes it in a Bendix for half a day but says a concrete mixer is better if more than 56 people are to be fed.—Katherine Pedell.

J. Fred Muggs and Brandon De Wilde: practically only ones who can eat their fill.

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

Col. Humphrey Flack

THERE'S a situation comedy with a new twist being telecast Wednesday nights on the Du Mont network. It's Colonel Humphrey Flack, which has dared to try to entertain viewers each week without benefit of any husband-and-wife team, precocious children, etc. It succeeds, thereby proving that all is not yet bromidic in TV situation comedy.

The series is based on a character created by Everett Rhodes Castle in a group of magazine short stories, and the producers have wisely adhered to the original concept. Colonel Flack is a con man of the old school but with Robin Hood leanings. He defrauds the rich to aid the poor, naturally deducting his own expenses. And the rich whom he cons usually deserve the bilking, indicating that crime doesn't pay on TV unless you are philanthropic.

Alan Mowbray in title role evidently relishes the assignment. The part isn't too unlike his numerous movie roles. It's a broadly-written character, and in the hands of a lesser actor could become farcical. Mowbray is good enough, though, to make his characterization warmly human and amusing.

Frank Jenks, also well known via the movies, plays the colonel's sidekick, Garvey. He's the one who has no more scruples than the colonel but doesn't always know what trick the colonel will pull out of his well-stocked hat. It's also a good role, and Jenks makes it a telling one. The supporting casts under Lester Vail's adept direction are generally good.

Colonel Flack: he also foils the "baddies" with his rapier-like wit and his fast talk.

Comeback Story

THE PRODUCERS of Comeback Story (ABC) probably had good intentions in planning their format. The show is designed to give down-and-outers another chance at the big-time. But in this case, even the best intentions don't make good entertainment.

As the title suggests, Comeback was originally planned to dramatize the lives of persons who had attained prominence in some field, suffered a misfortune, and are now trying to "come back." Probably because so few candidates would be willing to expose their stories, the program more recently has concentrated on persons who have already made their comeback, such as Harold Russell, the ex-GI who lost both hands in an Army accident. The new format is an improvement, but the show needs more. Much more.

George Jessel is emcee but for all his glibness, he seldom stands a chance. And if that weren't enough, Jessel leans heavily on a prompting device, and he's no smooth reader on-camera. He can break out with the tears when required, and they're probably sincere, but on this show they seem forced. If he'd only look at the person he's talking to once in a while, it would help.—R. S.

UNSEEN HERO

THE TV FLOOR MANAGER HAS TO DODGE EVERYTHING BUT WORK

'Synchronize your scripts:' Jim Fox, floor manager, here makes last minute check with, l. to r., Garth Dietrich, audio director; Don Appell, director, and Martin Horrell, producer.

Then he sets up the props; At left, Jim shows stagehand how much liquor to pour for important scene. Detail like this keeps him busy until time for show to go on air.

You're on: just out of camera range, Fox relays director's signal quickly to Actress Patricia Breslin.

BEHIND - THE - SCENES hero of every television program is the floor manager. With duties similar to those of a stage manager in a Broadway legitimate production, it's his responsibility to make certain that everything goes on and off the studio floor on cue—from actors to props.

The floor manager must live with the show, from the first run-through rehearsal until the final fade-out on your TV screen.

During air time, the director sits in a control booth, separated from the stage by a thick glass wall. His only contact with the actors then is through the floor manager, who serves as middleman, receiving instructions from the director and passing them on to the cast. He uses a miniature radio receiver equipped with a tiny earpiece to hear the director. With its own short-wave power supply, it resembles Dick Tracy's famed wrist-watch-radio.

One such floor manager is Jim Fox, a member of the NBC staff. A graduate of the Yale Drama School and a former teacher of stage directing with several years of little theater experience, Jim has handled more than 550 different shows since joining NBC. He was floor manager for Circle Theater for two years and was one of several who worked on the recent Ford anniversary show. Since the start of the fall TV season, he has been handling Campbell TV Sound-Stage.

Since he must stay at all times outside camera range, Jim often looks like a contortionist. Once he was squatting on the floor at the end of a particular scene, waving one actor to come on and another to leave. The actors only had three seconds to change positions and rushed on and off like football players. Both bumped Fox, sending him sprawling, but the scene went off on cue.

Almost surrounded by cameras, Fox passes along instructions to crew while Actors Arnold Moss and James Broderick run through their lines for show in background.

DRAMATIC STARS:

WHEN WRESTLERS GET HURT . . . IT'S AN ACCIDENT !

BAGEL-SHAPED Ed (Strangler) White appears less frequently on the TV screen than the more svelte professional wrestlers. He is slightly miffed by the showboating that has sprouted in sports under the searching television lights.

Spot the camera on a baseball diamond and the Smithfield starts coming out of the umpires. Pan on the stands and the fans start mugging.

"And look at the way TV affects some wrestlers," moans The Strangler. "You've got guys who stand there and make muscles, guys who wear long hair, guys who shake their heads like mops."

If there is anything that riles White it is overacting. The Strangler is quite a master at underplaying a role.

One of his most glittering performances came on Army-Navy game weekend of 1943. On Friday, Nov. 27, a Philadelphia bout between The Strangler and the Golden Terror, who votes under the name of Bobby Stewart, ended in a riot. As worked-up fans climbed into the ring, the wrestlers dumped them back. One fan resented the manhandling of White by the Terror. He turned to the Law.

The Strangler and the Terror were unaware of the impending action as they sipped beer and listened to the game over the radio the following afternoon in their hotel room.

When the law in the person of a constable arrived, the Golden Terror and a bottle of beer were reclining upon a sofa. It fell, therefore, to Strangler White to open the door.

As the Strangler recalls it, the constable asked: "Is this the apartment of Mr. Golden Terror?"

"'Indeed it is,' I told him. I invited him in, handed him a beer and suggested that we listen to the rest of the game.

Just A Couple of Pals

"Meanwhile Bobby (the Terror) whispered in my ear: 'Give me 15 minutes, Buddy' and took off. He was long gone when the constable said: 'It's time for us to go, Terror.'

"When I told him I was Ed White, he acted just like a spoiled youngster. He jumped up and down and screamed: 'I'll get you for this.' I just laughed at him."

The story as White tells it differs slightly from newspaper accounts. According to The Philadelphia Inquirer's Nov. 28, 1943, editions, when the constable mistook White for the Terror, the genuine Terror made his exit by saying: "Well, if he insists he should arrest you, I better go out and get a bail bond."

Upon learning White's true identity, the constable, according to The Inquirer, was quoted thusly: "You make like killing each other at night and room together in the day? Well, I'll be—"

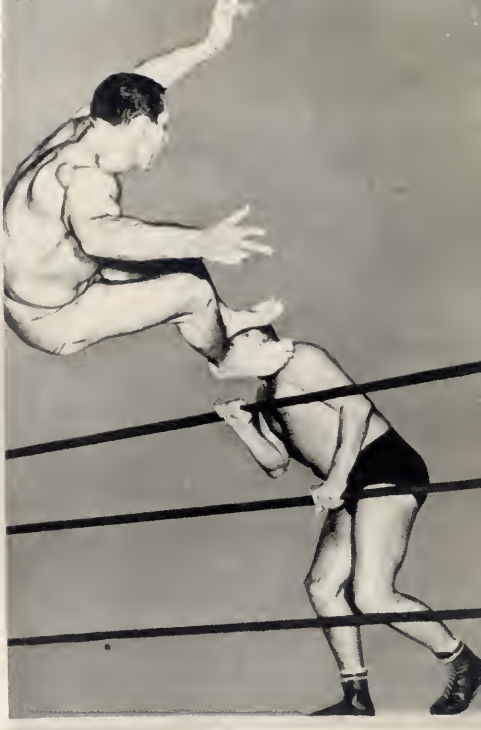
Shame on you, constable. The boys often share a room. Have to practice the concluding act of their next performance if their booking calls for frequent matchings, don't they?

Never Intentionally

Fear not for their health through violence in their hotel rehearsal or on the mat for that matter, constable. Once in a while a nose is bent, a tooth is broken. Never intentionally though.

Further, while two men are likely to meet each other more than once a week, they do not work strictly as a duet. Few newspapers list wrestling results, thus making it an almost impossible task to keep score on who meets whom and how often.

◀ Ed White: master at underplaying a role.



Feet first: but the boys seldom get hurt.

Ask Ben Epstein, the New York baseball writer whose colorful past includes service as a professional wrestler, whether two particular wrestlers have ever met 102 times and he replies: "At least that many times under one set of names."

White, like most wrestlers, has a sense of humor. So often the spectators miss out on the punch lines. Referees hear all.

Willie Clarke, who has played the third-man role for several decades, recalls his undue alarm once when he was in the ring with Gino Garibaldi and Joe Cox.

Willie could have sworn that he saw Garibaldi stick his fingers in Cox's eyes.

When Cox covered his face and staggered about the ring, the worried Clarke shouted: "What's the matter, Joe?"

"I can't see," answered Cox, anxiety in his voice, "I can't see because I've got my hands in front of my eyes."

All of which seems to prove there's no show business like wrestling and no showmen like wrestlers.
